

"Imam Hussein's (AS) Efforts for Guiding the Enemy Until His Last Moments of Life

One of the educational messages of Ashura is the endeavor to guide people until the final moments of life, even if the opposing side is the harshest enemy of humanity.

Just as Imam Hussein (AS) stated at the beginning of his uprising in a letter to his brother Muhammad ibn Hanafiya, guiding people was considered the most significant message of the uprising and movement of Ashura.

According to historical accounts, Imam Hussein (AS) and his companions continued to offer admonishments to their enemies, even on the day of Ashura, striving for their guidance.

In the annals of Ashura, it is recounted that when Imam Hussein's (AS) companions attained martyrdom, he single-handedly confronted a considerable number of enemies until they created a distance between him and his encampment. At that moment, Imam raised his voice to them: • "Woe upon you, O followers of the Abu Sufyan's clan! If you have no faith and do not fear the Day of Judgment, then be free".

Reflection: Being free means that if you lack belief in any religion or faith, you should display humane behaviors and liberate yourself from the constraints of preconceptions and judgments. I don't know"...
